How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy liver. When the liver is torpid the bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood; frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons' Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficiency.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED.
As a general family remedy for dyspepsia, torpid liver, constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the stomach and bowels.

W. J. McLEARY, Macon, Ga.

The Queen as a Mother.
The Rev. Robert Collyer recently made an after dinner speech in the course of which he laid some stress on the prevailing trait of motherliness in the character of Queen Victoria, and held it up for admiration.

It is well known that, especially among the middle classes in Great Britain, the magnificent habit of motherhood notable in their monarch has been, perhaps, the main spring of her popularity. The British matron feels that she has her highest justification in the character of her queen.

The spectacle of the wife of the martyr, John Rogers, who soothed the last burning moments of her spouse by standing around with nine small children and one at the breast (as duly set down in history and the New England Primer) has hardly higher inspiration for the British matron than the thought of the queen of England and her nine children, all of whom in due course of time have married and (except in one instance) have given the British taxpayers much to think about by having families of truly royal proportions.

The noble trait of motherliness which Dr. Collyer praised so highly is only natural to an august lady who has got so fixed in the motherly attitude. It is indeed her second nature.

The devotion to this high principle of the whole British nation, classes and masses alike, was finely summed up by the remark of a very simple minded and enthusiastic young Englishwoman last summer. An American traveler was conversing with her at a garden party where she was enjoying the excitement of her first season, and something was said about the recently announced engagement of one of her friends, another debutante. The young girl was asked if she proposed to allow herself to be wooed and won by any of her many attendant cavaliers during her first season, and she replied with towering naivete: "Oh, I fancy I shan't marry until I've had a season or two to myself. But when I do I hope I shall have as many children as the queen!" This highly British remark is a microcosm of the popular taste in the right little island touching the great economic fact that the family is the basis of the state.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Tea Gowns.

There is endless diversity in the shape and trimming of tea gowns. They seem to get more elaborate and beautiful every season. There are ethereal tea gowns, nothing but gauze and lace; aesthetic tea gowns, made of crepe woven stuffs, with flowing draperies; handsome tea gowns composed only of rich brocades and velvets, and tea gowns of nuns' cloth and soft silk that are merely pretty. The severe tea gown is generally made of self colored silk trimmed with passementerie. Cashmere is just as popular a material as ever.

An eccentric gown was made of pale yellow cashmere, veiled in front with white lace and ornamented with floating ends of brown velvet falling in stripes from the neck to the hem of the skirt. The ribbons were held in place at the waist by the girdle.

A gorgeous French model was of velvet in one of the new intermediate shades of brown, with a broad panel of palest blue and gold brocade on each side. It had an immense collar and a long train set in plaits just below the waist. The front was cut in a new style with long narrow ends like a mantle, and fringed with iridescent beads. The most beautiful gowns are generally made of diaphanous fabrics.

One in peach colored crepe—enough to make any woman "enthused"—had the front composed of a careless mass of yellow gauze and lace. The back was adorned with a cascade of the same material, and the sleeves were draped with lace at the top and finished at the wrist with gauze ruffles. Most of the new models have long sleeves, falling low over the hands.—Miss Mantalini in Pall Mall Budget.

Origin of Leap Year Proposals.
Some one asked me the other day what was the origin of women proposing marriage during a leap year. I looked it up, and while it may not be new to all I dare say it will interest many. In the year 1288 a statute was published by the Scotch parliament, of which the following is a copy, and is, to my mind, the origin of the custom or idea. I do not know that it is a custom or ever was:

"It is ordained that during the reign of her most blessed majesty, Margaret, like maiden, ladies of birth high and low estate, shall have liberty to speak to the man she likes. If he refuses to take her to be his wife, he shall be mulct in the sum of one hundredity pounds or less, as his estate may be, except and always if he can make it appear that he is betrothed to another woman; then he shall be free."

After the dear old Margaret had passed away the women became clamorous for their privileges, and to appease them another act of parliament allowed them the privilege every fourth year. This year is leap year, and no doubt the question will be asked, What gave rise to the notion that women may do their own courting?—Interview in Chicago Tribune.

A Show Baby.

A dainty little maiden of seven or eight years was the observed of all observers one day last week as, accompanied by her French bonne, she promenaded with great dignity of demeanor down Commonwealth avenue. She was arrayed in a cape coat of rose colored broadcloth bordered with beaver fur and lined with fawn and rose shot silk. Her tiny hands were thrust into an equally tiny muff of beaver, and a large fawn colored hat covered with pink ostrich tips shaded the serious eyes and golden curls of the little wearer. It would have been impossible to have found a fairer sight; but more than one of the onlookers saw in this element of sadness in the spectacle of a child contained, unchildlike mite whose career never once deserted her, despite the attractions offered by the crochets of "real live" children who were capering and shouting around her.—Boston Globe.

The Bambino.
In the old church of Ara Colia, near the top of the capitol steps, in the city of Rome, is a little treasury room where the sacred vestments are kept, and where, in a wonderful little repository, lies a wooden doll called the sacred bambino, representing the Holy Child Jesus. So strong is the superstition with regard to this child that in cases of illness it is sent for and taken in great state by some dignity of the church to the bedside of sufferers who believe in its miraculous power to heal and bless. In this old church, around the altars, are the offerings of those who claim to have been healed of their infirmities by the miraculous power of this wonderful child.

Here are repetitions in wax of maimed limbs; pictures of people rescued from burning houses; of children who fall from windows, receiving no harm; of women drowning in swollen streams, saved by the sight of this little child appearing on the brink. Before the altar may always be seen a kneeling throng, for the hearts of a great many of the people have opened and taken in a love for and a faith in this wonderful little wooden doll. At times there have been rumors of the bambino having been stolen, or, because of its displeasure at the sins of the people, having withdrawn itself from sight.—Harper's Bazar.

The Selection of Fruit.

Care should be exercised in the selection of fruit, as it is just as easy and as cheap to buy good fruit as the bad stock. Never buy a cat in the bag; or, in other words, fruits or nuts that are placed in packages by the dealers for the chances are against the purchaser receiving the same quality as is exposed to view. For instance, the wagon fruit peddler's profit is derived, not from the sale of short measures, but from the disposal of the bad and poor stock which he has. The peddler will search the wholesale market through for a damaged stock of grapes or bananas which he can purchase cheap. After an hour or two of mysterious work he has his wagon or handcart properly arranged for appearance on the public thoroughfares.

The first customers are almost sure to find themselves cheated after examining their purchases on their arrival at home. The good stock is held to attract the late trade. If you watch a peanut peddler just after he has loaded on a corner for business you will see him with a paper sack in hand picking out the discolored nuts, which will go to the first customers, and so it is with all hucksters. Pick your own goods and then you are sure not to be cheated.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Humor from the Isle of Man.

In the Isle of Man, as in Scotland, much of the humor depends upon odd turns of expression. "If ever I get to heaven pass'n' (parson), said an old parish clerk, 'it'll be under your patronage.'" The notion here is funny enough, giving a vivid glimpse of the future state as depicted by man who had seldom been outside his own parish. Or the humor may consist merely in the unexpected use of some particular word.

A queer old character who had been given a new muffler and kept it carefully wrapped up in paper instead of using it, replied to all remonstrances, "I'm not going far to make a hack of it at all." Upon another occasion he remarked to a visitor, who had been much benefited in health by a residence in the island, "You is a much better gentleman now till you was when you came," with which may be compared the courtly minister's "who putteth her ladyship's trust in thee."—London Saturday Review.

The Neptune's Head.

Above a butcher's stall on the west side of prosaic Washington market stands a peculiar relic. It is a beautifully carved idyllic head of Neptune, and once upon a time it graced the prow of some long gone clipper. Covered with grime and festooned with cobwebs, it looks down from its perch with the same graven smile with which it once met tempest and calm alike. It is cut from a block of English oak, and the craftsman who fashioned it was a master hand, for it has the breadth of treatment and firmness of detail of an antique Grecian bust. Properly mounted it would make a most effective ornament for a mantelpiece or center table, and in the hands of a curiosity collector who knows his business would undoubtedly bring a stiff price.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Value of Cold Sponging.

Accustom yourself to the use of sponging with cold water every morning on first getting up out of bed. It should be followed by a good deal of rubbing with a wet towel. This has considerable effect in giving tone to the skin and maintaining a proper action in it, and thus proves a safeguard to the injurious influence of cold and sudden changes of temperature.

Sir Ashley Cooper, the celebrated English physician, said: "The methods by which I have preserved my own health are temperance, early rising and sponging the body with cold water immediately after getting out of bed, a practice which I have adopted for thirty years without ever having taken cold."—Newport Observer.

Health of the Survivors of the War.
While the health of some men have been improved by their military service during the war, even to the preservation of lives that would have been lost had the owners remained exclusively in civil life, the health of the average veteran has been deteriorated by his service, and that he suffers more from illness and has a somewhat less expectation of life than other men of his age. This conclusion, based as it is upon an examination of the census data for a small part of the country, is a provisional one only.—Dr. John S. Billings in Forum.

A Romantic Story from Austria.
It is believed that influenza is answerable for both deaths—those of the Archduke Henry and his beloved consort—which, as announced, are the subject of widespread grief in Vienna. The archduke knew nothing of the death of his wife. The archduke's only child, Baroness Roineria of Waldeck, who had been deprived of both parents in such a tragic manner, says that they had a premonition of their fate. The baroness' grief is heartrending. She is being consoled by the Duchess of Alencon, sister of the Empress Elizabeth.

The tragedy is intensified by the romantic history of the union of the archduke and the opera singer by the sacrifices the archduke had to make and by the exemplary happiness of the pair during the twenty-three years of their married life. They were idolized throughout the Tyrol, and in Vienna the tall, strong figure of the archduke, with his long white beard and blue eyes, was a familiar object. He made the acquaintance at Graz of the prima donna of the theater in that town in the drawing rooms of the Styrian nobility. He privately engaged himself to her just before he had to leave for Italy to fight for his country, and the girl in his absence was offered bribes to release him, but resolutely refused.

At last the pair were married in the private chapel of the archduke's palace at Bozen. Large black flags floated from the four corners of the Vienna Rathaus as a mark of sympathy. Both bodies lay in state in the archduke's private chapel till Wednesday night. They were then conveyed to Bozen for interment in one grave beneath the chapel in the archducal palace, according to the wishes of the archduke. The Vienna papers express unanimous regret at the sad occurrence.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Fever of Gain.
One of the brightest and busiest newsboys in this teeming town stands on the north side of Park place, just off Broadway, every afternoon and evening except Sundays. He is an Italian, and apparently not more than twelve or thirteen years old. During the year that he has been selling papers in that particular locality he has built up a trade that keeps him busy nearly all of the time. He is seldom heard to ask a passer by to buy a paper. A very large proportion of the men who take papers from him are his regular customers. His keen eye discerns them half a block away. He knows what papers they want and has them ready as the customer passes.

Most of the customers also have the exact price of the papers ready to drop into the boy's hand, and it is seldom that a word passes between the lad and his regular customers. One of the boy's regular customers observed on Friday evening that the little fellow had no overcoat and questioned him about it. "No, I am never cold," said the newsboy, his teeth chattering meanwhile. "But you look half frozen," persisted the customer. "You earn money enough to dress warmly and you must take care of your health."

"I take care of my business. I got no time to bother with my health," replied the boy in a tone that plainly indicated his desire that the subject should be dropped.—New York Times.

Dr. Talmage's New Year's Maxims.
Make it the best year of all your life—the brightest, the happiest and the best. Imbue your heart with the freshness of the morning, your soul with the sparkle of the dawn. Resolve by good deeds and thoughts to make this the most triumphant year of your life. As a series of short maxims to carry with you through this year, let me give you these: Make every day begin and end with God. Be content with what you have. Have a hearty, joyful family altar in your domestic circle. Fill your home with as much good reading and bright music as your means will allow. Think ill of none, but well of all. If fortune favors you, think of others. Don't sham; be real. Keep busy and you will keep healthy. Respect all sacred things. Love God.—Dr. Talmage in Ladies' Home Journal.

To Prevent Counterfeiting.
It is curious to observe at this day the complicated geometrical patterns in which some of the ancient Roman seals are designed, unmistakably for the purpose of defeating the ingenious counterfeiter, as the engravers at the bureau of engraving and printing try by similar means to multiply the forger's difficulties. The usefulness of this art is shown by the fact that the coins of the civilized world are cameo multiplied to any extent by dies.—Jewelers' Weekly.

STEWART ON FREE COINAGE.

Senator Stewart has written a forcible letter in advocacy of free coinage to the Chicago Inter-Ocean. He presents a formidable array of facts and figures in support of silver. He says there has been no material increase in the gold coin of the world since silver was demonetized and that much gold has been absorbed in that time for non-monetary purposes. The aggregate of all the gold coin in the world does not exceed $3,750,000,000 or about half the amount of money of ultimate redemption which existed eighteen years ago when silver was demonetized. Population and business have enormously increased, and if there was not too much money then, can it be shown that half that amount is sufficient at the present time?

Previous to 1873 412½ grains of silver of standard fineness were worth a dollar because they could be exchanged for a dollar at the Mint. If the Mint was now open to silver upon the same terms and conditions which apply to gold 412½ grains of standard silver would again be worth a dollar at the Mint and a dollar in open market, for no one would exchange either gold or silver for less than its Mint value. The Senator shows conclusively that there is no possibility of a flood of silver from Europe, or any other part of the world, as the only cheap silver in existence is the small remnant of silver bullion recently purchased on foreign account.

In answer to the question, How free coinage will furnish relief? Senator Stewart says, if gold and silver are both treated as money metals the silver coin of the world will supplement the gold coin as formerly, and the aggregate of the two will more than double the basis of circulation and credit, restore confidence, increase the value of silver, and reduce the value of gold until the two metals are restored to their former parity.

The gold advocate asserts that legislation cannot affect the price of silver; was it not legislation demonetizing silver which depreciated its price? Would not the combined legislation of the world rejecting both the precious metals and substituting some other kind of money in their place affect their value? Suppose some gold goes to Europe and we had silver to take its place, would the people of the United States be injured? The more gold Europe has the cheaper it will be in that country and the higher the price of wheat, cotton and other farm products. "Europe," says Senator Stewart, "is our market for our surplus products, where we sell our wheat, pork and cotton to buy gold. If gold is cheap, we will obtain more of it for what we have to sell. Will that injure us? It must be borne in mind that the market price of farm products in this country is determined by the foreign price of what we export. The free coinage of silver would certainly give us more money in this country and stimulate production."

The Senator points out that two powerful classes, both having their headquarters in London, are interested in demonetizing and depreciating the value of silver. "The first are investors in bonds and securities, who desire collections in hard money, and are laboring to make money scarce to enhance its value. The other class consists of speculators in Asiatic products, who buy silver at about thirty-five per cent. discount in the United States, coin it into rupees or other Asiatic money, and sell it at par for Asiatic products, and make enormous profits."

Several thousand millions of European capital is invested in this country, and the great bankers of New York are investors and collectors on foreign account. They receive their orders from their European patrons or employers and transmit them to the banks throughout the country. The merchants are under obligations to the bankers, and the press in commercial centers voices the views of the bankers and merchants, whom it styles the "business community," while the great mass of the producers have no voice in the financial policy of the country.

The arguments of Senator Stewart for free coinage in and out of Congress are vigorous and unanswerable. They convince the masses of the justice of the silver cause, but the money of the English and other European investors and speculators who, as he says, are getting rich through cheap silver, control the politicians who run political conventions, and the people meekly submit to their decrees and divide on party names, which at the present time are almost meaningless.

his back. This would make his nomination almost a certainty. Mr. Cleveland cannot be a candidate, because he will have no support from his own State. At this distance from the great political centers it looks very much like the Democratic ticket is to be Hill and Boies of Iowa, or Hill and Gray of Indiana. Either combination will do, though we regard Boies as more available for the second place than Gray. The latter has been talked of for President and might not accept the nomination for Vice President. In that case the field would be clear for Boies. The convention has been called to meet in Chicago on June 21, less than five months from date. It is time that the people began to discuss the various aspirants with a view to making up their minds as to which of them our delegation shall favor. Personally we are for Hill and Boies. Under existing circumstances we are willing that the Presidency shall go to the East just once more. After that it must come West. If Mr. Hill had not declared for silver in such unequivocal terms, and if he did not have so strong a hold on the great State of New York, we would be to-day for a Western man; but as matters have shaped we believe Hill to be the best man for his party and the best man for his country.

In him is presented to the people of the West their best chance of electing a President favorable to silver. There must be a great deal of merit and good metal in that same man Hill. New York has plenty of rich men. Hill is a poor man. United States Senatorships bring from $300,000 to $1,000,000 all over the country. The New York Legislature waited on Governor Hill in a body, and asked him if he would accept a seat in the Senate without money and without price. There is something in a man who can command that sort of consideration and distinction at the hands of the Empire State. We believe that Mr. Hill will be found to be a very great man when the country comes to know him at his true value.

THE NEBRASKA GOVERNORSHIP.

The Supreme Court of the United States has decided that James E. Boyd of Nebraska is a citizen of the United States. Boyd was elected Governor on the Democratic ticket in November, 1890. A year ago, Thayer, Republican, who was not a candidate for re-election, refused to surrender the office to Boyd. The case was taken to the Supreme Court of the State, and two of the Judges of that tribunal decided against Boyd. Then the case was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States and decided as stated. Boyd will now assume the duties of Governor of Nebraska and Thayer, who was called an usurper, will have to vacate.

As Governor Boyd was inaugurated a year ago and assumed the duties of Governor, he will doubtless receive his salary for the last year, and Thayer, who has been drawing the salary which did not belong to him, will probably have to find it to the Treasury.

House Proceedings.
WASHINGTON, February 1.—Rules are still the subject of hurrying discussions in the House. The pending amendment this morning was one by Oates, providing for a committee of fifteen members on order of business.

Picker of South Dakota wished to offer an amendment, giving the Committee on Invalid Pensions the right it had during the 51st Congress to report at any time on general pension legislation, but a demand for the previous question by Oates put him off. Oates' amendment was rejected.

On motion of McCrary, (Ky.) the amendment was agreed to, requiring general appropriation bills to be reported by committees in long session, or forty days in short session.

An amendment by Enloe providing that committees in reporting private bills shall file them with the clerk to be placed upon an appropriate calendar, was agreed to.

Barrows (Mich.) offered an amendment re-establishing the rule of the last Congress, empowering the Speaker to count a quorum. Alderson (W. Va.) moved to add a clause, providing that in no case shall a hat, cloak or umbrella of a member in the clerk-room be counted.

Read replied that his impression was that officers of the House (elected by whatever party) were quite capable of honestly carrying out the rules of the House as they understood them.

Dockery (Mo.) quoted from utterances made by Reed in 1880, giving his idea of what constituted a quorum.

Alderson said his amendment was not intended as a reflection upon the present Speaker, but as a reflection on the tyrannical and arbitrary will of the Speaker of the last House, and the Republican brethren who had stood at his back.

Utah's Statehood.

WASHINGTON, February 1.—The question of Utah's Statehood is likely to become one of the political issues in the present Congress. The bill is now pending in the House for the admission of that Territory as a State and to-day Representative Bushnell of Wisconsin introduced a resolution on the subject. The resolution declares Utah has a larger population than the three adjoining States of Wyoming, Idaho and Nevada combined; that the President in his last annual message recommended that Utah be kept out of Statehood until there was satisfactory evidence of effective laws against polygamy, and if not that they be made and maintained, because as a Territory, Congress could reach and punish polygamy, while as a State it could not do so; that if the United States Constitution was amended so as to prohibit polygamy then there would be no excuse for not admitting Utah as a State, therefore, there was submitted to the several States the following, to be known as Article Sixteen of Amendments thereto: "Polygamy shall never exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction. Congress shall have power to make all laws for the enforcement of this Article and the punishment of its violation."

The Russian Famine.

WASHINGTON, February 1.—The horrors of the Russian famine were to-day brought to the attention of the Department of State. In a report from Minister Smith at St. Petersburg, he says in part: "Cold, as well as hunger, causes terrible suffering. The bread which many are eating is composed of wild arack, potatoes, chaff and leaves, and these terrible conditions inevitably produce disease. Within a radius of one mile there are 120 cases of typhus fever. An official estimate of the number of those without food or means of support who require aid is given as 14,000,000 persons, and this is probably below the true number. The loss to Russia by famine is estimated at $500,000,000. Up to the present time there has been few contributions from abroad, but the Government and people of Russia are deeply sensible of the spontaneous offers made in various parts of the United States."

The bread which many are eating is composed of wild arack, potatoes, chaff and leaves, and these terrible conditions inevitably produce disease. Within a radius of one mile there are 120 cases of typhus fever. An official estimate of the number of those without food or means of support who require aid is given as 14,000,000 persons, and this is probably below the true number. The loss to Russia by famine is estimated at $500,000,000. Up to the present time there has been few contributions from abroad, but the Government and people of Russia are deeply sensible of the spontaneous offers made in various parts of the United States."

Senate Proceedings.

WASHINGTON, February 1.—At the conclusion of the morning business the calendar was taken up, the pending question being the bill to appropriate $75,000 for a public building at Reno, Nev. Stewart moved to reduce the appropriation to $50,000, and spoke of the necessity of a public building there.

The La Abra claim was taken up, and after several minor amendments, the bill passed 43 to 5. The bill directs suit to be brought in the U. S. Court of Claims against the La Abra Silver Mining Company and all persons making claim to any part of the award to determine whether the award was obtained by fraud or otherwise by false swearing. A similar bill in relation to Benjamin Wall's claim was also passed, and the Senate adjourned.

Weather Conditions.

SAN FRANCISCO, February 1.—Weather conditions and general forecasts: Fair weather prevails in all districts, except in portions of northern California and Nevada, though rain fell to-day in Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys, averaging less than one-tenth of an inch, and a heavy rain of 1.22 inches fell at Los Angeles and 1.70 inches at Needles, in the past twelve hours. In the northern portion of Arizona about an inch of snow fell.

The Boyl-Thayer Decision.

LINCOLN, Neb., February 1.—News of the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the Boyl-Thayer case was received quietly here. Governor Thayer declined to be interviewed, merely stating that he would abide by the decision of the Supreme Court. Appointive officers accept the decision as final and are preparing to turn over their offices to other hands when Governor Thayer vacates.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently, to tone the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the cause of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

The Silver State publishes a rumor that the Sacramento Division of the Central Pacific will be extended east to Reno, which will also be the end of the Truckee Division, and that Superintendent Brazier will have charge of the road from Reno to Ogden. The Railroad Company reserve quite a tract of land near the Reno lumber yard for some purpose, perhaps for machine shops and round houses.

The Carson News came to hand last Sunday increased to double its former size and profusely illustrated. It contains pictures of our Senators, Representatives, Supreme Judges, State officers and some local celebrities. Some of the pictures flatter the originals, while more of them are no more like those they are supposed to represent than the man in the moon. The paper contains much interesting information and shows what energy can do in the newspaper line in Carson.

THE MEETING OF PRINCIPALS.

A Nevada School Exhibit at the World's Fair Discussed—Teachers' Institute.

The public school principals of Western Nevada met Saturday in the office of State Superintendent Orvis Ring. There were present Principals John E. Bray of Reno, R. C. Storey of Virginia City, H. E. Witherspoon of Gold Hill, P. S. King of Empire, F. H. Norcross of Verdi, E. E. Winfrey of Winnemucca, and Miss Alice Edie of Wadsworth. Professors Robert Lewers and Henry Thurlert of the University and Mark Averell of the Virginia City schools were also in attendance. The meeting was called to order and Professor John E. Bray was elected President, R. C. Storey Vice President and H. E. Witherspoon Secretary. The proposition of having a State Institute was discussed and decided favorably, and Superintendent Ring was appointed a committee of one to investigate the possibility of raising money to defray the expenses thereof.

A resolution was adopted strongly favoring an exhibition of the educational interests of Nevada at the World's Fair. A committee to select lines of work to be followed by the school in the World's Fair exhibit was appointed, consisting of Superintendent Orvis Ring and Professors Lewers and Averell. The meeting adjourned to meet on the 2d of April, when a full report of the committee is expected.

Snow Slide at Big Creek.

Last Monday a heavy snow slide occurred at Big Creek, Lander county, on the property operated by the Big Creek Mining Company. The miners working in the tunnel were imprisoned by the snow covering the mouth, but managed to dig out. The blacksmith shop was carried away, and everything it contained scattered over the mountain, but nobody hurt. The Reville says from the mine to Hogan's ranch, a distance of about four miles, seven snow slides occurred, and in places it is piled to the creek forty feet deep. One of these slides occurred at Pete Guiller's cabin, which struck four horses that were standing outside the corral. Three of them were carried over into the corral, but a beautiful black stallion is buried in the slide.

The Steam Sled.

Geo. Shafer of Truckee was in town Sunday and returned home yesterday. The gasoline engine, which he brought up from below recently to run his steam sled, was not of sufficient power and had to be discarded. He has now taken a two-horse power engine, which was used previously to run a sawmill in a butcher shop, and thinks that it will do what is expected. Mr. Shafer has every confidence in the success of the invention and says that some day in the near future, if we will have enough snow fall here, he will ride it down and show it to his Reno friends.

Want the Salvationists Stopped.

A note, of which the following is a copy, was received by the Board of Commissioners yesterday:

The Board refused to recognize the communication, as no signature was attached to it.

Why Does Solid Iron Float on Molten Iron?

This question, which has puzzled a good many observers, was satisfactorily explained by Dr. Anderson, in a recent paper on steel, read before the Iron Institute, London. When a piece of solid iron is thrown into a pot of molten iron or steel, the solid metal at first sinks, which shows that its volume is less than the melted metal; but soon the solid piece becomes heated which causes it to expand, its volume is increased, and it rises and floats on the surface of the molten mass. The action is the same both with iron and steel. Mr. Wrightson said: "The experiment was frequently made by throwing a piece of iron into molten steel. They could see it go down, and might think that it was on account of the impetus which the iron had attained in falling that height, but as a matter of fact, if the iron were put upon a fork and lowered, it would go down; but in the course of a few seconds up again, and kept on expanding until the piece of iron was a considerable distance above the surface of the metal; then it decreased in volume, and became of the same volume as the molten metal which it joined. Any one could see by the distance that the piece of iron went above the surface that it was of considerably less density than the molten metal."—Mining and Scientific Press.

A Youth's Inerduity.

A boy we know, says the Cleveland Leader, had some chickens of which he had made pets. He and his father went to work early in the morning, and while the rest of the family was away for the Summer, it became a question how the chickens were to be fed with proper regularity. The boy was equal to the occasion. He took an alarm clock and fastened it securely to one side of the barn by means of two spikes. Next he hung a bucket of corn to a rafter and connected it with the clock by a stout cord. He wound up the alarm and set it at 4 o'clock. At that hour the alarm went off, wound up the string and tipped over the bucket. And so the chickens were fed by clockwork.

YOUR COMPLEXION

It is woman's chiefest physical charm. It is often her only capital. It is always worth a great deal to her, in business, love or social affairs. No matter how browned, or rough or sallow your skin may be, or how much it is disfigured with freckles, moth patches, black heads or pimples,

Mrs. Graham's

FACE BLEACH

Will remove every blemish and leave your skin as pure and clear and white as it was in baby days. Your complexion will then be as nature made it. Instructions go with each bottle how to keep it so. Price $1.00. All druggists sell it. For sale in Reno by
